לע'נ פעסל בת ישראל מנחם / לזכות חילינו

*Our hearts are broken, but our resolve remains absolutely stronger than ever.
And therein lies the resilience, and the power, and the knowledge that we will prevail.*

RABBI SIMON JACOBSON

The best way to prepare for tomorrow is to place our trust in Hashem today.

RABBI DANIEL AGALAR

*There are those who mistakenly categorize Jews as religious and non-religious.
According to our Torah, there is no Jew who is not religious. All Jews are believers from birth.
Superficial, external factors may bring them to go against their true selves. But their hearts are always awake and open to Torah and mitzvos. They are only waiting for someone to press the right buttons.*

RABBI TZVI FREEMAN

Each of us possesses unique talents and gifts, and on account of these unique gifts, we all have something to offer everyone. The fact that Divine providence has presented us with the opportunity to help another person is the surest proof that we possess the means to do so effectively.

LUBAVITCHER REBBE, REB MENACHEM MENDEL SCHNEERSON (1902-1994)

Our life is like a tapestry. And by the tapestry's nature, it demands we work on it from the back - in a blind.
Shabbos is a reminder that one day in seven, or one hour in seven, or one minute in seven, we should step back and turn our tapestry over so we can see the larger pattern of who we are, the implication of our efforts, and the world wherein we work.
