

Greeting Men and Women at Once

26. When one greets men and women at once – e.g., an employer who walks into an office filled with men and women and says, “Good morning. How are you doing?” – it is permitted. In this circumstance, he is not specifically greeting a member of the opposite gender.

(See Shevet Halevi 5:207 §7)

27. It is therefore advisable that in an office where multiple men and women work, the employer should say “Good morning” and “Good evening” to everyone together when possible.
